ABSTRACT

This directory provides general information on American Indian and Alaska Native tribes and lands. The information was compiled from several resources including the "Federal Register," the Bureau of Indian Affairs, "The Native American Almanac" (A. Hirschfelder, M. K. de Montano), the "Atlas of North American Indian Tribes" (Carl Waldman), the "Reference Encyclopedia of the American Indian" (Barry Klein), "The Indian Tribes of North America" (John Swanton), the "Handbook of North American Indians" (William Sturtevant), and the "Tribal Leaders Directory." Part 1 lists over 700 tribes by state and includes the address, telephone number, and status of the tribe in relation to the federal government. Status information indicates whether the tribe has gained federal recognition, has petitioned for federal recognition, was denied federal recognition, was restored federal recognition, has gained state recognition, or has been determined ineligible to petition for federal or state recognition. Part 2 lists over 300 Indian lands by state, including reservations, rancherias, colonies, and historic Indian areas. Entries include the tribe affiliated with the land, the date the land was established, and number of acres. They also indicate whether the land is recognized as a federal or state reservation, or is unrecognized by federal or state governments but is considered a reservation by people living there. Includes alphabetical indexes for tribes and lands. (LP)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface ii

Part One: American Indian Tribes 1

Index for Part One 63

Part Two: American Indian Lands 80

Index for Part Two 97

Preface

This directory contains the name, address, and telephone number of the American Indian tribes for which information was readily available. Part One contains a list of tribes with information on the status of the tribe in relation to the federal government of the United States. Part Two contains a list of Indian lands, including reservations, rancherias, colonies, and historic Indian areas. These lists are grouped alphabetically by state. The indexes contain alphabetical lists of tribes and lands.

Compiling a list of Indian tribes is complex, since various sources of information sometimes conflict. The most authoritative sources were used to compile the list. Sources include the Federal Register, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, The Native American Almanac by A. Hirschfelder and M. K. de Montano, the Atlas of North American Indian Tribes by Carl Waldman, the Reference Encyclopedia of the American Indian by Barry Klein, The Indian Tribes of North America by John Swanton, the Handbook of North American Indians edited by William Sturtevant, and the Tribal Leaders Directory.

The word tribe simply refers to a group of people. The word does not fit all the groups of aboriginal Americans, but has long been used as a convenient way to classify the many diverse groups. The word tribe is often used to refer to all the groups, including simple family units and complex confederacies composed of several nations. Tribe is often used interchangeably with nation. Today American Indians use a wide range of terms to describe their political organizations, including confederacy, nation, tribe, band, community, village, and corporation. Some tribes have politically merged with others, and some tribes have splintered into several autonomous tribal nations.

Federal recognition of a tribe means that the U.S. government acknowledges that the tribal nation exists as a unique political entity. Some tribes are recognized by their state government, but not by the federal government. Many tribes have federal recognition; some have asked for federal recognition; some have been denied federal recognition; and some have never asked for federal recognition. Since a tribe can be self-defined by its members, there are some tribes which have neither state nor federal recognition.

Although this list is as accurate as we could make it, addresses and telephone numbers change over time. Obviously, we cannot guarantee the accuracy of specific information. If you notice any items which need to be updated please let us know and the change will be included in any future revision of the directory.

The American Indian Rehabilitation Research and Training Center publishes a catalog which contains 180 items, including books, articles, research reports, training manuals, audiotapes, and videotapes. The center brochure, catalog, and newsletter are available upon request. We look forward to serving you.

Part Two

American Indian Lands

Federal reservations are considered to be land with boundaries established by treaty, statute, and/or executive or court order, and recognized by the federal government as territory in which American Indian tribes have jurisdiction, except where Congress has expressly stated otherwise. Land held in trust is property associated with a particular American Indian reservation or tribe, held in trust by the federal government. The trust relationship involves federal protection of the land and its resources.

Indian lands are known by various terms, including reservations, rancherias, colonies, and historic Indian areas. The following list of Indian lands is not meant to be definitive, but is a resource to help identify Indian country.
